

Michelle McIntyre, MPH, CIH, CSP

Michelle McIntyre is a certified industrial hygienist and certified safety professional with over 20 years of experience in technical and regulatory aspects of environmental and public health, industrial hygiene, and health and safety for clients on the East and West coasts. Through her career, Ms. McIntyre has supported clients in industrial, commercial, government, and construction sectors in complex environmental liability and litigation matters. She has designed policies to cultivate awareness and protect the public health in various areas, including chronic disease prevention, healthy behavior promotion, disaster response, and injury prevention.

Currently, she is a Principal Consultant with EORM-A BSI Services Company, an Environmental, Health and Safety and Sustainability consulting firm providing services to a broad range of clients, including research and development organizations, manufacturing, heavy and light industry, pharmaceutical and chemical manufacturers.

Ms. McIntyre's previous consulting experience was with AMRC in Fort Myers, Florida, ENVIRON International Corporation in Irvine, California and Envirosentials, Huntington Beach, California, where she provided technical consulting, expert support, and project management in cases that involve indoor air quality, industrial hygiene, health and safety, and evaluation of environmental exposure to chemical, physical, and biological agents.

Ms. McIntyre's holds a Masters in Public Health. She spent over 10 years implementing local, state and federal regulations to nine townships in New Jersey as a licensed Health Officer and Registered Environmental Health Specialist.

Michelle enjoys volunteering her time and experience to multiple organizations including the Construction Specification Institute (CSI) as President of the Florida Southwest Chapter and as Director of the Florida Southwest Chapter of the National Association of Women in Construction. In her free time, Michelle enjoys boating and paddle boarding with her husband and 14-year old son in Punta Gorda, Florida.